Catherine had been treated for breast cancer several years ago and got better. A new round of tests show that the cancer came back under her arm, an unusual location for her type of cancer.

Catherine's oncologist recommends radiation therapy instead of chemotherapy. Catherine is uncertain because of the location of the cancer.

The expert oncologist reviews Catherine's medical history. She recommends chemotherapy and highlights relevant medical research.

Included Health immediately collects Catherine's medical records and connects her with a world-class oncologist who specializes in breast cancer.

Catherine wants a second opinion from an expert. She remembers that her company offers Included Health as a health benefit at no additional cost.

Catherine shares the second opinion with her oncologist who changes the treatment plan based on the report.

After the second opinion, Catherine feels confident that chemotherapy is the right treatment plan for her.

The Included Health care team checks in with Catherine throughout her treatment to support her and answer her questions.
